Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Sunday 14 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Bright spells and showers on Monday and turning milder.

This Evening and Tonight:
Lingering rain continues through the evening, turning heavy at times but easing during the night. Mostly dry and cloudy overnight with some isolated showers and a few fog patches forming. Windy and milder than recent nights. Minimum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Monday:
A dull and cloudy start for many though some brighter breaks developing, mainly over the southern areas. Isolated showers may arrive for a time in the north. Breezy, feeling mild. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Unsettled on Tuesday with blustery showers and sunny interludes across the region. Dry with sunny spells on Wednesday, although rain arrives overnight and persists through Thursday morning. Windy throughout.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.